Think On These Things

We, as a church family, have suffered much loss since this new year has begun. I am thankful that we have the Almighty God to turn to for comfort, strength, peace, and hope during these times of grief. I am often reminded of the Scriptures that remind us that our days are but a vapor, a shadow, and that we are like grass or flowers that are here today and gone tomorrow. As I ponder these things, I have to ask myself if I am using my time wisely and with an eye on eternity. I would like to relate a story from Charles Spurgeon that may help us to think about the fact that no one is guaranteed tomorrow:

"We have not much time in which to do the little we are going to do; let us pack it tight, get all into it that we can. Dr. Chalmers one night spent a very happy evening with some friends. Among the rest a Gallic chieftain was present, who was much amused with Chalmers' anecdotes and stories. They went to bed, and in the middle of the night the chieftain was suddenly taken ill and died; and Chalmers, writing of it afterwards, says, 'How differently they would have talked if they had been aware of what was about to happen.' Let us live as though we knew that we might this evening finish our life."

Let us ask God, as did His servant Moses: "So teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom." Psalm 90:12

Something to think about as we go about our week.

Love and blessings,

Trace
